William P. Blanchard of Stonington was instantly killed while waiking the railroad track just east of the Mystic railway station Monday morning. He was employed as night watchman at the Ninigret mill and was on his way to the station, presumably to board a trolley car near by for his home on the eastern border of Stonington borough, when he was struck by the locomotive of the accommodation that left Westerly at 6.30 for New London. when he was struck by the locomotive of the accommodation that left Westerly at 6.30 for New London. He was thrown to the side of the track and when the trainmen reached him he was dead.

Mr. Blanchard was walking on the eastbound track when a freight train approached and he stepped over to the wostbound track in front of the accommodation train. The whistle of the passenger locomotive was tooted vigorously, but the noise of the passing freight evidently drowned the sound of the whistle. The engineer stopped the train a quickly as possible, but not until Mr. Blanchard was struck and killed.

The body remained beside the track for nearly two hours, or until after Dr. George D. Stanton viewed it and gave permit for its removal to a Stonington under license in 1905-1906.

The body remained beside the track for nearly two hours, or until after Dr. George D. Stanton viewed it and gave perinit for its removal to a Stonington undertaking establishment.

Mr. Blanchard was about 55 years of ge, somewhat eccentric and lived lone. He was of good habits and had done correspondence for several news-papers, substituting for regular corre-spondents in Stonington and Mystic.

Conductor E. D. Huntington, charge of a westbound freight train that passed through Westerly Sunday night, had a peculiar accident when at he Niantic station to the eastward of Westerly. He was standing near the westerry, he was standing near the locomotive tender giving the go-ahead signal when the long from hook used by the fireman became dislodged from the top of the coal pile in the tender and struck Conductor Huntington a glancing blow in the side of the head, inflicting a wound to the surface of the skull and about three inches in us, but recovered soon after and was transferred from there to New London and assisted to his home, where he received medical and surgical treatment. His injury is not serious.

The success of the annual muster of the Rhode Island State Firemen's league at Narragansett park Labor day, conducted by the Cranston Firemen's league, has resulted in a proposition for the latter league to arrange for an annual muster in Cranston, on some date that would not conflict with other musters in New England. This propomusters in New England. This proposition has been favorably considered by the Cranston league and the matter has been favorably and informally discussed at a meeting of the Rhode Island State Firemen's league.

Since the Crescent park musters have been discontinued the firemen of Rhode Island have had only the state, New England and Brockton musters to look forward to with any certainty. The idea of an annual tournament at

The idea of an annual tournament at Cranston is therefore received with favor by the various fire organizations of Rhode Island.

At a meeting of the directors of the Rhode Island-Connecticut league held in the office of the president, Dr. John M. O'Connell, in Westerly it was for-mally decided that the Westerly team had won the championship and Presi-
